

Philosophy, B.A.

From Plato to Confucius to Nietzsche, to contemporary thinkers, humankind has been pondering the bigger questions of existence almost as long as humans have been around. Not only can you learn about what the great thinkers pondered, but who knows? Maybe you'll be able to contribute your own ideas to the mix. At the very least, as a Philosophy major, you'll become acquainted with, evaluate, and respond critically and imaginatively to important elements of human experience, and to do so in a scholarly manner with an eye toward appropriating the best for oneself and one's culture.

Experience Your Learning

There are plenty of activities that you can engage in as a Philosophy major that will provide you with practical experience in the area of exercising your mind.

Philosophy Club: Provides a venue for students to meet and interact with others who share a common interest in philosophy. The club is a place to expand, discuss, and potentially argue about philosophical topics. It is also a resource for those who are struggling to write a philosophical document; a refuge in which individuals can raise and discuss any philosophical questions they have pondered and a haven for those who seek edification in the fundamental questions of life.

The Humboldt Philosophy Forum: The forum covers topics of contemporary significance and aims to increase understanding of the diversity of ideas, values, and practices embodied by our culture.

Philosophy Colloquia: Brief talks given by a student or faculty member followed by informal discussion.
