

ABOUT APF

Since 1953, the American Psychological Foundation (APF) has been promoting psychology and extending its benefits to the public. APF provides financial support for innovative research and programs that enhance the power of psychology to elevate the human condition and advance human potential both now and in generations to come.

APF promotes the use of psychology to improve the human condition through its support of:

- Scholarships that encourage the best and brightest;
- Early Career Funding and Seed Grants to encourage early career psychologists and promote certain types of seed work; and
- Targeted Program Grants to enrich lives through research, demonstration projects, and direct interventions where psychology is needed (e.g., understanding and preventing violence; community rebuilding in the aftermath of natural or social disaster).

APF is incorporated independently of the American Psychological Association (APA).
